

The halfback darts through a hole off tackle and pivots past a linebacker—only to be nailed in the secondary because he has to sidestep a dog. And as the referee chases the culprit off the field, the crowd roars in amusement.

Such an episode is far from being far-fetched at Williams College (Williamstown, Mass.), where canine capers are traditional at home football games. Indeed, the presence of pooches extends far beyond the playing fields.

In "Where the Boys Are," a guide to college dating edited by girls at Smith and Mount Holyoke, Williams is described as "The only school where your date will expect you to be snowed, not over him but over his dog."

Actually, college rules no longer permit individual students to keep such pets as Rupert, Zoomer and Fang, but several strong-willed dogs insist upon making their headquarters in certain small residential houses. Then there are faculty dogs, which tend to follow their masters, and campus-oriented town dogs. All in all, there is a lot of doggy action around Williams, as shown in these pictures.

Dog Notes

At commencement exercises last June (1966), President John E. Sawyer was about to announce the names of distinguished seniors who had won academic prizes when a mongrel climbed the platform stairs, walked slowly across the stage, and with some dignity descended the steps on the other side.

A senior member of the faculty, preoccupied with some intellectual problem, once was followed in a walk across the campus by a female dog. Close on her heels were a pack of about 25 lovesick male canines. The professor never noticed.

Youth Beat

THE NATIONAL REPORT ON WHAT'S HAPPENING

WHAT'S NEW AND TRUE IN BELLY DANCING? Disturbing news has come from Cairo where Egypt's Nasser first banned and now has just barely allowed—that is, only fully clothed—belly dancing. This ancient, undulant art vividly portrayed on pharaohs' tombs . . . is practiced currently in cloaked form by young girls at Nile desert weddings and in Cairo night clubs. But, despite Nasser, it is in no danger, since it is big and growing bigger in America. YOUTH BEAT has learned from young Morocco, U. S.'s leading exponent of this eastern dancing. She has stunned clubs, Broadway stages, movies and nighttime television, exposing this quivering, rotating dance—once termed the "hoochie-coochie"—but performed by her "with great dignity, authority and serenity." She says it is thousands of years old and will survive. . . . As the true form of oriental dancing it is now performed throughout all North Africa by young (and not so young) girls (clothed and unclothed). Scholarly Morocco passed on the surprising information that "belly dancing" originated from antique harvest rites—birth rites—it actually simulates and prepares muscles for child bearing. Morocco, who's a golden-skinned genuine gypsy, picked it up after she turned professional dancer in her teens . . . fascinated by its snakelike rhythms. Now performs it nightly, wearing seven pounds of studded bra and hanging necklace, plus 12 pounds of hip-hugging fringed belt and 15 yards of whirling skirt. Should teens, after exhausting the frog, monkey, skate, turn to some style of belly dancing? "Why not?" asks Morocco, an authority who also speaks 11 languages, knows karate, has an IQ of 186, a B.A. and an M.A. "But," adds firmly, "do your schoolwork, first."

BUCKS FOR BOYS AND BIRDS: That once moss-covered institution, the commercial bank, has grown lots more sprightly . . . one sign is that banks (at their discretion) now make loans to under-21s. For instance, for car loans (approved by parents), with that longed-for spring car as collateral . . . and to reliable, hard-working teen-age groups for practical projects, such as special summer activities of 4-H and similar organizations. But the biggest way, national banking authorities inform us, is in loans to students . . . this coming fall, or future years. Over $400 million will go over the money counters to almost half a million of you this 1966-67 school year. Up to $1,000 is borrowable by junior and senior college undergrads, $1,500 by grad students . . . interest is six per cent and you have until 10 years after graduation to repay. Uncle Sam stands back of the loans, and if your family is not so rich, good old Uncle Sam helps you pay the interest. Want some of those bucks for book learning? Over 7,000 banks are authorized to make these loans . . . to reach one of these sprightly banks nearest your home, check with the financial officer of the college you're sweating or yearning for.

WATCH OUT—TWIGGY CLOTHES THREATEN: Twiggy, the cockney toothpick who is the world's top model today, landed in the United States with her line of teen clothes . . . British-designed to fit her mini-"figger." We sneaked into the private hotel preview . . . viewed the Twiggy labels . . . shown by toothpick models—that are predicted to sell $10 million worth this spring and summer. Our spying eyes saw: dresses, shorts suits, pants suits, a zippered tent . . . all running very short (11 to 13 inches above the knee), very skintny, very light, very bright. They carry names like "Baby Doll," "Boys Type" . . . cost in the $20-30 range and up. The secret advance warning we send ahead is: American girls endowed with not unusual, not unfeminine, and not undesirable girllike proportions (like bosoms, like hips), had better bring along a giant shoehorn to squeeze into this twiglike Twiggy line.

topic of discussion, and Mrs. Waters brought to our attention quite a few things we did not know.
The Project of the year was chosen, Baskets of Cheer for our Sick Friends.
The next meeting, will be May 8 at 1:30 at the Patmos Town Hall. We invite you to attend. There will be an auction of Pot plants and other useful things at this meeting.
Mrs. Monroe Kent and Mrs. Verdo Hollis will be the hostesses.

BRIDE-ELECT HONORED

Miss Linda Tye, bride-elect of Labe Haynie, was honored with a bridal shower given Friday night, April 7 in the lovely new home of Mrs. John Richard (Dick) Carlton of Bodecaw. The honoree wore a three piece suit of daffodil yellow with matching accessories and was presented a beautiful corsage of yellow tinted carnations. Mrs. Harila Tye and Mrs. Paul Haynie, mothers of the engage couple, also received corsages. The many lovely and useful gifts were displayed on a lace covered table centered with an arrangement of yellow iris, Punch, cake squares, nuts and mints were served in the dining room area by Mrs. Ermon Allen and Mrs. Holin Baker. Mrs. J. D. Allen attended the bride's book signed by 36 guests. Hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. John Carlton, Mrs. Ermon Allen, Mrs. J. D. Allen and Mrs. Holin Baker.

HELEN HELP US!

by Helen Bottel

ANOTHER IN THE "WHAT IS A SERIES"
Dear Helen: You had so much response to "What is a Soldier" that I thought you'd like to read another "What Is." I hope you like this anonymous article as well as I did:—BARBARA
WHAT IS A BOYFRIEND
Between the bothersome stage of adolescence and the delightful felicitude of fatherhood, we find a gangly, jealous, but darling hunk of man called a boyfriend. Boyfriends come in handy, and they come in all types of hot rods and clothes, but on the inside they have the same motto: "Go with as many girls as you can, break as many hearts as you can, and hurt as many feelings as possible without being made a fool of or failing for anyone yourself."

Boyfriends are found anywhere and everywhere, except where they are supposed to be—at their girlfriends' houses. When you are washing dishes or washing your hair, they want to come over, but when you want a kiss, they are fixing carburetors or adjusting faulty gear shifts.

When you are with his friends he's making smart remarks and disregarding your new dress, but when you're alone, he's an angelic Romeo. When you want him to make a good impression on your parents, he trips on the coffee table, spills everything, and won't answer you when you speak.

No one can get suck a kick from sneaking around corners, losing the cops, playing poker all night, and watching other girls walk down the street.

He likes cars, bowling, drive-in-movies, Bridget Bardot, slow music, hamburgers, gum and GIRLS!

He isn't much at getting up in the morning, getting a haircut, regular dates, meeting parents, or driving straight home.

He has the appetite of a jungle creature, the energy of a dead crab, the stories of an encyclopedia (or should we say fairy tales?), the temper of a lion, the rare determination of a steel trap, and a heart as big as the Rock of Gibraltar. . . sometimes.

He is the last person to get up in the morning and the last person to go to bed at night.

Nobody else can get grease all over his face, under his fingernails, all over his nose, shirt, pants and whatever else he has on like a boyfriend. Nobody else can squeeze into a glove compartment a crowbar, hammer, two screw drivers, pliers, two books of trading stamps, a T-shirt, a girl's scarf, a fair collection of female-type hair clips, a bottle opener, six can openers, four traffic tickets, a picture of a girl, a deck of cards, . . . and more.

He has the charming disposition of an atom bomb, and the gratitude of an innocent baby. He is a lover with four hands and a sweetheart with ten arms. You can keep him away from the girl next door (Oh yeah?) but you can't keep him away from your TV set. You might as well give up. He knows everything but your moods; what you mean when you say something, what you like and dislike, and he often reminds you of it.

You call him a jerk, a bum, a sneak, but he looks at you with "that kind of look . . . and then when all things are doubtful, he can mend them all with three magic words: I LOVE YOU. — ANONYMOUS

Dear Barbara: Thanks for a happy contribution to YAF. And again — though these "What Is" articles are anonymous, they owe their origin to Alan Beck, who originated the format with his "What Is A Girl?" etc. series. — H.

Television and Radio

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Dating Game" on ABC Saturday evenings revolves around assorted pretty single girls who direct inane or way-out questions to three bachelors concealed behind a screen. From their answers, she picks one — for a big date which is a short visit to some far-away spot.
It's all rather silly, but some of the unexplained strings do stimulate the viewer's curiosity.
How can attractive, eligible young men — who presumably can get all the dates they want — be persuaded to play such a dangerous game? Moreover, suppose the girl and the blind date, stuck for several days in some distant spot, discover they can't stand each other?

Dennis Cole, the good-looking, eligible 23-year-old actor who plays the junior detective in "Felony Squad," was able to provide some but not all of the answers. He recently was chosen sight unseen by Kim Carnes of the New Christy Minstrels to be her date. The reward was a four-day sojourn, all expenses paid, in Puerto Rico.

"I went on the show because I figure that the more exposure I get on television the better it will be for my career and for our series," explained Cole earnestly.

However, Kim was summoned home in the Midwest in a family emergency. Dennis was told to pick his own date. Off they flew with their chaparrone for the holiday.

"It was all just great," he reported, returning to California via New York. "And the chaparrone was a ball — they use people who work in the producer's office. They had good reservations and a big busy scheduled planned. Actually if I'd gone with some girl who turned out to be just awful, it would have been easy just to split and go off alone to see the sights or lie in the sun."

Recommended weekend viewing:

Tonight — "The Investigation," NBC, 9:30-11 EST, drama, produced this season on Broadway, based on war crime trials testimony about Nazi concentration camps. To be repeated Sunday afternoon, 3:30-5.

Sunday — National professional soccer, CBS, 2:30-4:30.

"Dead As Dormouse"

The term "dead as a dormouse" stems from the fact that the dormouse, small rodent which inhabits the colder climates, hibernates in its winter nest and often sleeps as long as six months at a time, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Except The LORD Build The HOUSE They Labor In Vain That Build It

Dear Sinner:

Please don't scoff the Lord. He is long suffering and His mercy is great to them that fear Him. He is our only hope, but hope deferred maketh the heart sick. Life's road would quickly come to a dead end without Him. Why not take Him at His word today? He can perform miracles with your life. He can give you the desire to attend church. He can make your deeds shine, your good works glow, so that others may be constrained to glorify the Lord, to find their way before it is too late. He says, "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." — A-men.

Too often we are inclined to think that anybody who spends a dollar for advertising does it from a purely selfish standpoint. But here, public - spirited, God - worshipping people, are paying each week to insert in this paper a full page, from which they will draw no quick response nor prompt sale. These people are good and humble business men — We owe them our gratitude.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

Even the Pharaohs Had Their Teeth Troubles

By WILLIAM LAWRENCE, D.D.S.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

illustrates existence of the worm theory of decay which has persisted through thousands of years, even to this day in some places.

"After the supreme God created heaven, heaven created the earth, the earth created the rivers, the rivers created the canals, the canals created the worm. The worm went weeping before the sun god, his tears flowing, (saying) 'What wilt thou give me for my food? What wilt thou give me for my sucking?' The god answered, 'I shall give thee the ripe fig and the apricot.' 'Of what use are they to me?' said the worm. 'Lift me up among the teeth. Let me dwell in the gums, that I may suck the blood of the teeth and eat their marrow.'"

Then this was recited three times:
"Fix the pin and seize its foot."

Because thou hast said this,
O worm,
May the sun god smite thee with the Might of his hand."

Care With Ashtrays At All Times Urged Throughout House

A must, not only during Spring Clean-Up Week, but all year round, is the proper attention to the condition of ashtrays in every room of the home, the American Insurance Association said today.

Ashtrays, preferably large ones, should be kept in every room. They should be substantial and made of metal, glass, or some other fire resistant material.

A companion warning is this:
Never smoke in bed. It is one of the greatest hazards to life.

If a person smoking in bed dozes off, and bed clothes catch fire, the chances are he will never know what happened to him, the Association says. In most cases, toxic gases will take their toll before heat or fire awakens the smoker.

The Buddhism of Burma does not permit caste or even class distinctions in that country.

THE DOCTOR'S MAILBAG

Q—My doctor is giving me pills and shots because I am over weight. I am losing weight and I feel better but my friends say that I am endangering my health. How do you feel about reducing drugs?

A—There are so many kinds of reducing drugs that a categorical answer can't be given. Some of these drugs, if taken for a short time, help a person to get started losing weight but I wouldn't advise anyone to make a career of taking them.

Q—I am having trouble losing weight. After taking Eskatrol and Dexedrine for five months I have lost very little. My doctor can't understand this. Can you explain it?

A—Eskatrol is a combination of dextroamphetamine (Dexedrine) and prochlorperazine. The first suppresses the appetite and the second relieves the emotional tensions produced by dietary restrictions. A farmer is never mystified when his livestock gains weight. No doctor should be mystified when his patient fails to lose on a reducing regimen. Who's kidding who?

Q—I am a housewife. By staying on a balanced low-calorie diet I have managed to lose 18 pounds. Is staying on such a diet harmful in any way?

A—An active housewife needs about 2,300 calories a day but there is no harm in a diet that is low in calories if it includes the essential vitamins and minerals and if you don't become emaciated.

Q—My doctor says I have an enlarged liver. What causes it? What foods should I avoid?

A—The most common cause is congestion due to a valvular heart disease. Tumors, especially those that obstruct the common bile duct, and the early stages of cirrhosis also cause liver enlargement. What sort of diet you should follow would depend on the results of liver function tests. It may be that no dietary restriction is necessary but, in any case, alcohol should be avoided.

Orioles Nip Kansas City, Yankees Lose

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer
Care for a bit of Can You Top This?
Bill Dillman of Baltimore and Bill Rohr of Boston, a pair of pitching prodigies, played that old game in their major league debuts Friday and if Dillman hadn't run out of innings, he might have won the match.
Rohr came within one strike of no-hitting the New York Yankees but lost his bid on a two-out, 3-2 pitch, single by Elston Howard in the bottom of the ninth inning. He finished up a 3-0 winner.
Dillman came out of the bullpen for the Orioles and hurled five hitless innings, earning credit for Baltimore's 7-1 victory over Kansas City.
Both Dillman and Rohr are 21 and getting their first taste of life in the big leagues. And so far things couldn't be better for them.
"It would have been nice to have a no-hitter," smiled Rohr, "but it's awfully nice to be 1-0 in the big leagues." A left-hander, Rohr was 14-10 at Toronto last year.
In Friday's other American League action, Minnesota downed Detroit 5-3 and California clubbed Cleveland 10-1. Chicago and Washington were not scheduled.
In the National League, Philadelphia stopped New York 5-1, Chicago dropped Pittsburgh 8-5, Atlanta shaded San Francisco 6-5, Houston whipped Cincinnati 8-2 and St. Louis ripped Los Angeles 8-4.
The long ball provided Rohr with all his runs against the Yankees. Rookie Reggie Smith led off against Whitey Ford with a home run and Joe Foy added a two-run shot in the eighth.
An opening day crowd of 14,375 at Yankee Stadium began pulling for Rohr as the youngster set the Yankees down and closed in on the possible no-hitter.
When Howard drove what the youngster described as a flat curve into right field for the spoiler, the fans boomed.
"It was the first time I ever got a base hit and got booed in New York," Howard said.
Bob Allison and Zolito Versalles hammered home runs for the Twins against Detroit.
Andy Etchebarren ripped a three-run homer for the Orioles, who knocked out Kansas City starter Lew Krausse on a three-run first inning which included a triple by Paul Blair and a double by Frank Robinson.
Jay Johnstone and Jim Fregosi smacked three hits apiece and Don Mincher and Rick Reichardt hammered home runs as the Angels romped past Cleveland.

Actress Plans to Quit Series
LONDON (AP) — Actress Diana Rigg is quitting the British television series "The Avengers" in which she plays secret agent Emma Peel.
ABC-TV said Miss Rigg, 28, does not wish to renew her contract after the present 26-week series ends in the summer.
A former model and Shakespearean actress, she wants to concentrate instead on stage and film roles.
"The Avengers" is Britain's top-selling TV export.

MANILA (AP) — American singer Gary Lewis and his Philippine bride of one month arrived Thursday from Los Angeles for a "surprise visit" with relatives.
Mrs. Lewis, the former Sara Jane Suzara, said they kept their flight plans secret "because we wanted to surprise our parents."
The couple, who were married in Los Angeles last month, will stay here for about 10 days.
"We are just here to visit the family and have a nice time," Mrs. Lewis said.

Hollywood Hurts Delaware
NEWARK, Del. (NEA) — Peter Lindbaek will play in the No. 1 position for the University of Delaware tennis team this spring—if his movie commitments don't interfere.
Lindbaek is from Oslo, Norway, majoring in dramatic arts and speech at Delaware. He also is a good athlete.
Last fall, he was the center-forward on the University of Delaware soccer team even though he missed a week when he flew home to see the premiere of a movie in which he appeared.
Lindbaek studied at the University of Oslo for a year before entering Delaware.
Peter's father was a banker in Oslo and for awhile the youngster thought about a career in economics. "But now," he says, "I would like to stay in this country and study dramatic arts. I want to make my living as an actor."
In addition to being the star of the tennis team, Peter is one of the star performers in the University Theatre where he recently completed a role in Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth."
Besides acting, tennis and soccer Lindbaek is an accomplished skier and gymnast.
His best performance in tennis came in the 1963 Norwegian National Junior Indoor Championships when he finished third.
pect to break the world's record on your first trip?"
"Now," said the boy. "The stupid jerk missed the spinner. He's not so smart as you said."
"He's not, eh?" said the old man. "How do you know he didn't miss it on purpose. Maybe he's showing you he's wise to those hidden hooks. You're not fishing bluegills or sunfish, now. This is muskie country."
Three hours went by until, finally, the muskie made his move.
He smacked the lure as it hit the water. With all his weight the boy set the hook, then again, and again. Now the battle of life and death began. The muskie towed the boat across the cove, making such powerful dives that several times the rod was pulled completely into the water. But the boy hung on. The old man slowly reached for the gaff and the .22 caliber revolver. For a full hour, he observed the battle.
Suddenly, the spent fish lay next to the boat, his eyes filled with fear and fatigue. After the fish was weighed at 34 pounds, the boy looked up at the old man and said quietly, "Thanks, grandpa."
In northern Wisconsin, boys sometimes become men while fishing for muskie.

The Grip
By FRANK BEARD

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
The starting point in golf is the grip. You have only one direct connection with the club and that is your hands. Therefore, any error in this coupling will result in many more errors on down the line.
It is imperative that your grip be correct in every facet in order to insure proper functioning of the rest of the swing. A proper grip is one in which the club is always held in the fingers and not in the palms of hands.
A closer look shows that the shaft lies in the fingers of the left hand running diagonally from the first knuckle of the first finger to the last knuckle of the small finger. The same is true of the right hand fingers. The club rests only in the fingers.
The left thumb comes to rest just to the right of the shaft center and the right thumb just to the left of the shaft center. The cohesive force of the grip is in locking of the hands together.
A PROPER GRIP is one in which the club is always held in the fingers and not in the palms of the hands.

Florida Elixir
By SANDY PADWE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
GAINESVILLE, Fla. — (NEA) — Dr. Robert Cade, Brady Greathouse and the University of Florida athletic department would like it emphatically noted that "Gatorade has nothing to do with an alligator."
Gatorade is a nutrient supplement which is about to be marketed by its developers. The liquid, which looks and tastes like lemonade, is dispensed to athletes to supplement fluids lost during competition.
The liquid was developed by Dr. Cade, an assistant professor of medicine at the Florida University College of Medicine.
Brady Greathouse, the University of Florida's head trainer, has been giving the supplement to the football team since the 1965 season.
Last fall, with the Florida football team in the top 10 all season, countless news stories were written about the team, including one about Gatorade.
Since then, the university and the athletic department have been deluged with requests for samples and explanations.
"Most of them are serious requests," Greathouse said. "Right now I've got 40 letters on my desk which I haven't even answered yet. Even coach (Ray) Graves is answering the letters now."
However, one caller from Kansas said he heard rumors that Florida athletes were drinking "alligator juice." He wanted to know the university's secret in draining the juice from the animals. "We are sorry," Greathouse told him, "but the rumors are not true."
The product derived its name from the University of Florida's nickname, the Gators.
"We've had football teams, baseball teams, hockey teams, boxers and racing drivers inquire about it," Greathouse said. "Most of our teams here at Florida use it."
"One boxer's manager, a fellow from the West Coast, called us and said his boy had trouble going past the fifth and sixth round. He asked for some of the Gatorade. Then I read where the boxer beat Brian London. (Heavyweight Jerry Quarry of Los Angeles recently defeated London.)

NEW DELHI (AP) — Tourists wanting a cheap vacation on a houseboat should plan on going to the Kashmir Valley in northern India. Rental rates for economy class houseboats have been especially reduced during this International Tourist Year to 10 rupees ($1.30) a day.
The Indian government, in an effort to attract more visitors and more foreign exchange, has even abolished the tourist visa fee for all of 1967.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — (NEA) — Felipe Alou can remember as a little boy when there was no gasoline to drive a car in Santo Domingo and Papa Alou couldn't get work in his normal trade as a carpenter.
The only way they could eat was papa would go out and catch fish in the waters of the Caribbean. And Felipe and his little brothers, Mateo and Jesus, would go out into the lush countryside and forage for jungle fruit.
The diversion from privation was baseball, which was big in the Dominican Republic, especially after visits by teams like the New York Yankees and the Brooklyn Dodgers. In time, Felipe grew up to be a robust specimen who could hit a baseball a long way, run and throw. The New York Giants wanted him.
"But I couldn't speak a word of English," he mused as he sat on the dugout steps of Municipal Stadium in West Palm Beach, waiting for the Atlanta Braves to play an exhibition game.
"We had no money, and we owed $500. That was the only reason my folks let me go to the United States. Otherwise, they wouldn't let me."
Within two years, in 1958, Felipe became a big league player with the Giants. Brother Matty followed on his heels, and by the last month of the 1963 season, the three Alou brothers were assembled in the outfield of the San Francisco Giants. Their prospects of remaining intact as the first all-brother outfield in the history of the majors were remote, however, because the Giants still had a fellow named Willie Mays to play centerfield.
The Giants also found Felipe something of a filibusterer on the subject of his brother Matty, who warmed the bench a couple of years (while Felipe slugged 25 homers, drove in 98 runs and batted .316 in 1962).
"I was worried about Matty," reviewed Felipe. "He had a bad knee cartilage, and they wouldn't operate on him. I went to the front office and they said, 'Don't worry about him. Take care of yourself.' Next thing, I was traded."
That was in 1964, to the Milwaukee Braves. Last year, Matty went to the Pittsburgh Pirates. He hit .342 to lead the National League in batting. Felipe hit .327 (including a career high of 31 home runs) for the (now Atlanta) Braves to finish second. Only little brother, Jay, who was once regarded as potentially the best of the Alous, remains with the Giants, and he had a mediocre '66 season.
"He feels," said big brother Felipe, "the Giants don't like him very much because they traded me and Matty. We care about Jay because he's the youngest one and evidently he had a lot of trouble last year. I was telling him all winter long to forget about it and play his own game."
"We know now that for the good of all three of us, it is better they split us up. That way, during the season, we don't have to worry about the other guy not playing—like we used to. We are professionals, all three of us."
Any sentimentality about playing together is assuaged during the winter when all three perform on a team which Felipe manages in the Dominican Republic. Jay plays left field. Matty is in center. Felipe takes over right.
"The easiest position," grinned Felipe. He is a tremendous personality who, with the move of the Braves to Atlanta last year, became the most popular player in that city. In addition to playing the outfield, he was at third base for a couple of games, at shortstop for a couple, and now seems to be designated as the first baseman on a team which is well-stocked with outfielders (Henry Aaron, Mack Jones, Rico Carty).
"I don't consider myself the best first baseman in the league," he admitted. "I have to work hard at it. But I'm satisfied to be the first baseman of the Atlanta Braves."
He likes Atlanta because the weather is warm, like in his native Dominican Republic. He feels it made him a better hitter last summer.
Felipe came to spring camp in Florida ready to resume where he left off. "I'm already in shape from winter ball," he said.
His spring exercise is mainly vocal.
"Every year," he said, "I have to get used to English again. You know, all winter I speak Spanish."

The Chippewa Flowage was a sleeping giant in the dawn. Wisps of mist clung like angel hair to the Christmas trees rimming the shore. A lone green rowboat—with two passengers—glided across the slick surface, mirroring the heavy, gray sky. So still... so peaceful.
But beneath the water's quiet roof the muskie, mightiest of all fresh-water fish, was on the feed—perhaps glancing that moment at the boat carrying the 12-year-old boy and the old man.
"Do you think we'll catch a muskie, grandpa?" asked the boy.
"Well," said the old man, "the muskie is a very moody critter. Sometimes he'll feed for days, eating everything in sight including baby ducks and mink and even squirrels and birds perched on low-slung branches.
"Other times he'll just loaf, some say he broods, not even eating. But today is good muskie weather. Yep, I'd say we got a pretty good chance of catching one or two."
The boy's hands trembled while rigging his heavy-duty casting rod with special 50-pound test line.
The boat drifted close to where hundreds of submerged tree stumps formed a kind of Egyptian palace for the muskie. The boy began casting and retrieving his deep-running lure.
The big spinner—simulating a mouse—passed over a large stump. Suddenly, the resident muskie tore through the still depths, swirled the muddy bottom into a cloud, and muscled into the morning air, shaking his long, fine head and crashing back on his side.
His knees shaking through faded dungarees, the boy exclaimed, "Did you see him? He musta been 100 pounds at least!"
"Well, 30 pounds anyway," said the old man. "The world's record is under 70 pounds, you know. Do you expect..."
This is done by overlapping the little finger of the right hand with the first finger of the left. This gives the hands the opportunity to work as a unit and keeps them from working separately.

Hollywood Hurts Delaware
NEWARK, Del. (NEA) — Peter Lindbaek will play in the No. 1 position for the University of Delaware tennis team this spring—if his movie commitments don't interfere.
Lindbaek is from Oslo, Norway, majoring in dramatic arts and speech at Delaware. He also is a good athlete.
Last fall, he was the center-forward on the University of Delaware soccer team even though he missed a week when he flew home to see the premiere of a movie in which he appeared.
Lindbaek studied at the University of Oslo for a year before entering Delaware.
Peter's father was a banker in Oslo and for awhile the youngster thought about a career in economics. "But now," he says, "I would like to stay in this country and study dramatic arts. I want to make my living as an actor."
In addition to being the star of the tennis team, Peter is one of the star performers in the University Theatre where he recently completed a role in Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth."
Besides acting, tennis and soccer Lindbaek is an accomplished skier and gymnast.
His best performance in tennis came in the 1963 Norwegian National Junior Indoor Championships when he finished third.
pect to break the world's record on your first trip?"
"Now," said the boy. "The stupid jerk missed the spinner. He's not so smart as you said."
"He's not, eh?" said the old man. "How do you know he didn't miss it on purpose. Maybe he's showing you he's wise to those hidden hooks. You're not fishing bluegills or sunfish, now. This is muskie country."
Three hours went by until, finally, the muskie made his move.
He smacked the lure as it hit the water. With all his weight the boy set the hook, then again, and again. Now the battle of life and death began. The muskie towed the boat across the cove, making such powerful dives that several times the rod was pulled completely into the water. But the boy hung on. The old man slowly reached for the gaff and the .22 caliber revolver. For a full hour, he observed the battle.
Suddenly, the spent fish lay next to the boat, his eyes filled with fear and fatigue. After the fish was weighed at 34 pounds, the boy looked up at the old man and said quietly, "Thanks, grandpa."
In northern Wisconsin, boys sometimes become men while fishing for muskie.

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — (NEA) — Dr. Robert Cade, Brady Greathouse and the University of Florida athletic department would like it emphatically noted that "Gatorade has nothing to do with an alligator."
Gatorade is a nutrient supplement which is about to be marketed by its developers. The liquid, which looks and tastes like lemonade, is dispensed to athletes to supplement fluids lost during competition.
The liquid was developed by Dr. Cade, an assistant professor of medicine at the Florida University College of Medicine.
Brady Greathouse, the University of Florida's head trainer, has been giving the supplement to the football team since the 1965 season.
Last fall, with the Florida football team in the top 10 all season, countless news stories were written about the team, including one about Gatorade.
Since then, the university and the athletic department have been deluged with requests for samples and explanations.
"Most of them are serious requests," Greathouse said. "Right now I've got 40 letters on my desk which I haven't even answered yet. Even coach (Ray) Graves is answering the letters now."
However, one caller from Kansas said he heard rumors that Florida athletes were drinking "alligator juice." He wanted to know the university's secret in draining the juice from the animals. "We are sorry," Greathouse told him, "but the rumors are not true."
The product derived its name from the University of Florida's nickname, the Gators.

Expressway Warning

The April issue of Reader's Digest has an article by safety writer, James Nathan Miller, who warns that old driving habits on modern expressways can be fatal. It is a timely warning as more and more concrete is poured for highways of the future and the accident toll keeps growing by leaps and bounds.

As many motorists have no doubt discovered high-speed expressway driving calls for basic precautions—gas, tires, and so on. In addition to this, and telling what to do in case you have a flat on one of those thruway demons (pull off on a shoulder; or stop, and wave traffic around you several hundred feet from your car.) Miller gives good advice about planning a trip.

One of the big headaches of modern travel is that motorists arrive in a metropolitan area without any idea where their turn-offs are, how to get to a downtown hotel, to the office of a waiting client, or to where Aunt Maggie lives. Failure to map a route in advance can be lethal.

Over half of all expressway accidents are at the highway "points of decision." As Miller says, "Those few seconds of decision are critical: hesitation, changing lanes, a last-minute swerve, or most dangerous of all, stopping and backing against traffic to reach the exit can cause chaos and death."

Miller's advice to anyone having to make a split-second decision on a fast turn-off is to keep going even if it means adding 50 miles to your trip. This is certainly hard-to-take advice, but in the end, the life you save may be your own.

The growth of high-speed expressways has exceeded public education on how to drive on one and survive. The Miller article, which originally appeared in "Family Safety," is a step in the right direction. Quite likely there will have to be more government safety brochures and better and clearer road maps produced as time goes by. The motoring public will demand this. Until this happens, the vacationer and ordinary traveler is on his own. —Monroe (La.) News-Star

The Box Score Speaks for Itself

Newspapers are roundly criticized for what they don't do; they are seldom thanked for what they do. Every newspaperman has learned to live with that public attitude. Critics assume that a newspaper staff can perform the miracle of being everywhere at the same time, and that all news should be fashioned to every reader's special interest in the amount of space given it, the display accorded it, and to his own special judgment of what constitutes news.

Typical of the criticisms is that when it comes to teenagers, newspapers distort the facts by playing down the good that teenagers do and playing up the bad. In a letter to the editor, Dr. R. L. Skinner becomes the typical newspaper critic. He makes a special case of our coverage of recent Easter weekend riots to prove his implied point that we just aren't fair to wholesome teenage activities.

Well, we looked up the box score, for the past seven days—Sunday, March 26 through Saturday, April 1, comparing the pictures and space given to teenage activities and accomplishments which brings honor to them, with the space given to the Easter weekend riots. Here is what we found:

Thirty-four inches of copy and two pictures covering the riots. One hundred and fifty-five inches of copy and 13 pictures covering activities of teenagers whose record makes us proud of them. —Florence (S.C.) Morning News

Spain Cites Abuses by the British

MADRID, Spain (AP) — A government spokesman said Thursday night that Spain's ban on foreign flights over her territory near Gibraltar resulted from abuses by British planes, not from Spain's claim on the British-held rock.

After the ban was announced, Britain called off a new round of talks with Spain on the future of Gibraltar and said it would not negotiate under threat.

Lunar Landing Sites Set

Stretching across the moon's face from the Ocean of Storms in the west to the Sea of Tranquility on the east, eight sites have been pinpointed by NASA as the most promising landing areas for the first U.S. manned mission, now expected no sooner than 1969. They were selected after study of photographs covering 35,000 square miles taken by three Lunar Orbiter spacecraft and the Surveyor vehicle that landed in the Ocean of Storms last June. All sites lie along the lunar equator, the target zone requiring least maneuvering by landing craft. Communications with an Apollo mothership remaining in orbit also would be most reliable.

Sabre Jets Bomb Friends by Mistake

By ROBERT TUCKMAN

SAIGON (AP) — Premier Nguyen Cao Ky said today a fortified barrier is being built along the northern frontier of South Vietnam to stem the flow of North Vietnamese forces into the south.

Ky said the barrier, made up of mine fields, barbed wire and bunkers, would run just below the demilitarized zone separating North and South Vietnam.

He said it would cross from the South China Sea coast inland for 15 to 20 miles to the jungled mountains near Laos.

As Ky disclosed to newsmen the start of a little "Magnot Line," the war lapsed into sporadic actions marked by one of the worst bombing errors recorded so far.

Two U.S. Air Force Super Sabre jets, swooping down for strikes in early morning darkness under radar control, dropped their bombs off the intended target and hit South Vietnamese troops, causing heavy casualties.

A U.S. military spokesman, after revising casualties three times, placed the toll at 29 South Vietnamese soldiers killed and 70 wounded.

Comic Strips Taking Hold in Europe

PARIS (AP) — Frenchmen are getting their first look at what American youth and their parents have been chuckling at for years—the funnies.

American comic strips and their creators are the center of attraction at an international exposition here in the Louvre.

The exposition is sponsored by the Museum des Arts Decoratifs and will run through June 12. An extension is being planned, however, in view of the public's smiling response.

"We are highly encouraged by attendance so far, both from the public and professional circles," said Claude Moliterni, director of the French Society of Research in Illustrated Literature.

"This is an exciting climax to the 18-month campaign we have been conducting to inform the French public on American comic strip concepts."

More than half of the exposition's six display rooms are devoted to American comic strips, their artists and scriptwriters.

The exposition also traces the evolution of figurative drawings from carved Trojan columns to space-travel funnies. The technical production of comic strips and their influence on art are given equal emphasis.

Minor Accident Before Parade

At 3:45 p.m. Friday afternoon, Ronnie Henderson, age 9, running across East Second street, collided with a car driven by Pauline Rose Hawley. He was taken to a local hospital where he was treated for bruises and head lacerations and was released. City officer A. C. Shyard investigated. No charges were filed.

There are two main acts in applying for work, we were told. The first is to fill out the questionnaire neatly and accurately. The second is to make a good impression during the interview.

Appearance and action are what govern the impression you make. Be neat, polite, alert, and remember the interviewer's name.

Avoid extremes in your attire, your hairdo, and your language. Refrain from chewing gum or practicing some of the training received in the schoolroom. Or, taking a Summer Job.

Some will find jobs and some will not, but according to recent information received, the difference does not depend just on luck. (This is not meant to discount the value of being in the right place at the right time, though.)

Why are we talking about summer employment when it is only April 15? The successful ones, our source said, are those who start the earliest, try the hardest, and play ahead. Some experience is always valuable, but most young people are lacking in this. In fact, that's what they are trying to obtain. They should remember that others their age are probably in the same predicament.

If there is some previous work experience, needless to say, an employer will look upon the applicant more favorably. The same is true if the prospective employee has some knowledge or training in a particular field.
